In a perfect world, no one spills drinks, children don't write on walls and the puppy arrives housebroken.

When it comes to decorating our homes for our real lives, we either give in to our less pragmatic side (and cringe when the silk settee is stained) or sacrifice beauty for practicality. But there is a happy middle ground requiring no sacrifice of personal taste. You just have to look in some unexpected places.

These fabrics were originally created for outdoor living and are specified by interior designers for luxury hotels and resorts, where they must remain pristine despite monsoon rains and blazing sun. Also ideal for residences, these machine washable performance textiles withstand today's modern scourges – dark denim dye, self-tanner. A white fabric once too precious for sofas is now a viable choice.

These wallcoverings were also created for hotels and restaurants. But residents of any active household can appreciate the incredibly durability and practicality of these textured vinyl looks, and how they beautifully mimic luxurious leathers, woods and grasscloths.

To learn more about these and other commercial wallcoverings from the Wallcoverings Association, visit www.wallcoverings.org. To see the complete line of performance textiles, visit www.chellatextiles.com.
